What is your diagnosis?

A 37-year-old woman was referred with a painless mass in the right posterior neck space, which had gradually appeared in a one-year period.

There were no other associated symptoms except mild numbness of the area surrounding the mentioned space.

Fig. 1. A-E. Contrast and non-contrast CT showing a partially heterogeneous enhancing mass with multiple calcified foci in the right posterior neck space which have displaced the vessels anteriorly. No surrounding fat stranding is evident.

What is your diagnosis?